

Trump's Impeachable Tweet
The Atlantic

 1.4K  24

Convictable Tweet

Millions Watched and Heard

Robert Thibadeau

Nov 17 · 2 min read

Impeachment is a suspicion. This was not a suspicion. It is a convictable tweet. With all the intended harm in plain sight. We all watched it.

And for all those who think you can bad mouth an employee, you cannot. Not in public in a way that can affect their future prospects for a job. Even in private. If any of you do this, you better check the law before you do it again. This is also called Gaslighting. If you can prove firing with cause, it is still not certain that you can bad mouth the person in the mass media or to a future possible employer.

However, in the context of a bribe, this has been proven now to have Trump lies attached. A lot of people think this is Trump taking a bribe. He was asking for a bribe. That is worse. And that is also proven by his own admission and the admission of others that work for him, in public, and we saw it. There are millions of direct witnesses under the Rules of Evidence in most of the USA, indeed, the world.

Here is Trump's Bribe, and how his lying works around his extorted bribe requests and the Suit on his Motive in the Internet Court of Lies:

Bribery and Lies

Two Peas in a Pod

medium.com

Here is how and why he uses Lies:

Trump's Trick

How He Gets Away With It

medium.com

Here is George Washington convicting Trump and why:

As George Washington wrote we all lose our Liberty...

Respect for its authority, compliance with its law, acquiescence in its measures, are duties enjoined by the...

medium.com

)

Trump Impeach Convict Lies Bribes

About Help Legal