> From the time Lawrence learned of the Sykes-Picot Agreement, he was playing a game that was borderline treasonous. The Arabs, you see, were fighting and dying alongside Lawrence based on what he knew to be a lie. He took on attempting to sabotage that lie. Some historians claim it was Lawrence who tipped off Emir Faisal about the British double-dealing, which set off the Emir attempting some double-dealing of his own — an offer to change sides that came to nothing when the Turks would not put up a lie to match the British lie.
>
> Betrayal Times Two: Arabs and Kurds   👏 69   💬 1
> Steve Russell

Robert Thibadeau
Oct 28 · 1 min read

This is an interesting example of a lie by action not by speech. Lawrence of Arabia effectively derailed a pan-Arab union by military action that pretended to support it, but effectively destroyed it. Lies are really a basic property of how our brains think, not how we speak or write lies in natural language. Natural language is just a window on the amazingly fast, precise, and accurate predication engine of the neocortex. It conjures complicated sentences and stories but our natural language is simply the communication protocol for these, and not the basic mechanism which can be expressed by action, movies, hand waving, smiles, and silence.

Fiat Lies are Genocide on the Human Race

The Internet Court of Lies

medium.com

Makes you wonder which Agency of the American government should be called the Agency of Lies. Perhaps each Agency has lies that are their particular meat and potatoes. These lies should not be fiat lies, they should all be turned to into conversational, folk, lies that we are all informed about and can support.

)

This is an interesting example of a lie by action not by speech.

ISIS   World   Politics   History   Donald Trump

About   Help   Legal

ISIS   World   Politics   History   Donald Trump